Farmers Urged to Demand Premium for Long Cotton

Cully Cobb Cautions Against Expecting U. S. to Take Care of Premium

EXPLAINS PROGRAM

Lengths Above 7-8ths-Inch Should Command More Than 12 Cents Total

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Cully A. Cobb, director of the AAA's Cotton Division Wednesday issued a statement urging cotton producers to insist that they receive from buyers a premium on cotton which is above average in grade and staple length.

"Under the present loan and price adjustment plan," Cobb said, "cotton growers are in a position to get the benefit of the premiums which are due them on the better grades and longer staple lengths of cotton. Such producers will lose if they sell this cotton for the price paid for middling 7/8 inch cotton in the belief the price adjustment payment will take care of them."

Under the present adjustment plan, growers will receive the difference between the average price at the 10 spot markets on the day they sell their cotton and 12 cents per pound of cotton on their actual production not in excess of their Bankhead allotment.

For example, Cobb said, the average price for white middling 7/8 inch cotton in the 10 spot markets on August 30, was 10.53 cents a pound.

If a producer sold on that day, the government will pay him a difference of 1.47 cents a pound and he would receive this payment even if he sold premium cotton on August 30 which brought him 12-cents a pound.

Cobb said official quotations issued by the Agricultural Department August 30, showed that at Carolina mill points white strict middling inch cotton of Southeastern growth was bringing 12 1/2 to 130 points more than middling 7/8 inch cotton; and that at Alabama, Georgia and East Tennessee mill points, white strict middling inch cotton of the same growth was bringing 12 1/2 points more than middling 7/8 inch cotton. On the same day white cotton of strict middling grade and one inch in staple length was bringing 100 points more than white middling 7/8 inch at New Orleans, 100 points more at Memphis, and 105 points more at Houston and Galveston.

"Therefore," Cobb said, "the producers of better than middling grades and longer than 7/8 inch staple length cotton who sold on August 30 should receive, including adjustment payments, more than 12 cents for this cotton."

The present plan is an improvement of the loan program of the past two years because those programs made no provision for the producer of premium cotton to benefit.

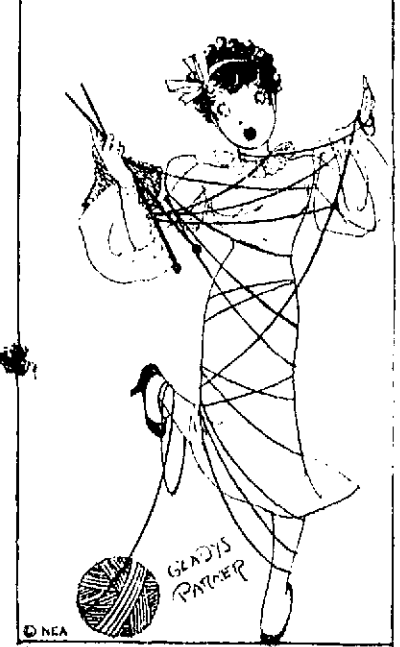

Cotton Pool to Transfer

Announcement was made Wednesday that October, futures contracts held by the 1935 cotton producer's pool would be transferred to distant months superseding previous announcements the pool was considering acquiring.

Last Man Is Taken Off Dixie Safely

Daring Rescue of Passengers, Crew Made in a Storm

Third Day Aboard Liner Piled on Florida Key Has Happy Ending

DEATH LIST RISES

Florida Governor's Aide Estimates Hurricane Toll May Reach 1,000

MIAMI, Fla. — (AP) — The task of removing passengers remaining aboard the hapless liner Dixie, Tropical Radio reported Thursday morning, was completed early Thursday by three ships—while the rescued persons unfolded a sea song of courage.

The transfer of those who remained on the liner, which is fast aground on treacherous French Reef, in the Florida keys, was carried out with celerity and without incident, messages from the Dixie's master, Captain E. W. Sundstrom, indicated.

MIAMI, Fla. — (AP) — The trail of death and destruction cut by a tropical hurricane across the Florida keys, relief officials estimated Thursday, was marked by a toll of 200 to 500 lives and possibly "may reach 1,000."

The hurricane, eddying in its destructive powers, soared north through Georgia as the Florida rescue corps quickly moved into the stricken regions, to be met by scenes of horror and desolation.

Roosevelt Acts
HYDE PARK, N. Y. — (AP) — President Roosevelt directed his immediate aides Thursday to supervise relief in the Florida hurricane area and to investigate why adequate precautions apparently were not taken to protect veterans in the work relief camp from the devastating gale.

Toll May Reach 1,000
TALAHASSEE, Fla. — (AP) — W. P. Moity, personal representative of Governor Ruffalo, said in a telegram to the governor, "Everyone as far south as Cuba colony has been moved out—the injured first; and we are now moving the dead. There are 50 so far."

MIAMI, Fla. — (AP) — A rising sea and rain halted rescue of passengers late Wednesday from the Morgan liner Dixie, aground on treacherous French reef, with 164 out of a total of 384 passengers saved, the owner's agents reported.

The report, from H. S. Hebble, supervising engineer of the line at Miami, was made to the Morgan Line officers in New York almost 48 hours after a hurricane had swept the big ship on the reef.

At the time weather halted rescue efforts, 100 passengers and 54 crewmen had been transferred from the Dixie to six other ships, Hebble asserted.

He listed the following passengers and crewmen aboard rescue ships, most of which, he said, were proceeding to Miami, 60 miles to the north.

United Fruit liner Atenas: 20 passengers. (An earlier report said Atenas was proceeding to Charleston, S. C.)

Morgan liner El Occidente: 36 passengers, 14 crew.

Morgan liner El Mundo: 20 passengers.

United States Coast Guard cutter Carabassett: 24 passengers.

Tanker Renner: 10 passengers.

United Fruit liner San Bonito: 40 members of crew.

The cutter Carabassett, in a wireless message to Jacksonville headquarters, said a stiff southwest gale halted the lifeboats from a fan-like fleet of rescue craft.

The Carabassett reported she was proceeding to Miami, 60 miles distant, and leaving further operations to the cutter Sanchez. The Dixie had been reported to carry 233 passengers and 131 crew.

Storm Subsiding
MIAMI, Fla. — (AP) — The violent tropical hurricane which swept the Florida keys with an unofficial toll of from 200 to 500 lives was headed back northeastward across the state Wednesday night with apparently diminishing force.

CCC Company Goes to Minnesota, But Gives Hope Thanks

Farewell Message Written by Boys of Co. 3738 to Local Public

A ST. LOUIS HOLIDAY

They Thank Burke and Samuel for Roundtrip Truck Ride Labor Day

Editor The Star: We are sending an article on our trip to St. Louis, and also our thanks to the people here at Hope for the kindness they have shown us boys since we arrive here. If you will put this where the folks can see it, preferably in your paper, we'll give you a vote of thanks 150 strong. Thank you, sir. THE CAMP BOYS, CCC Co. 3738 St. Louis.

We wish to offer our greatest thanks to Capt. Marie H. Meyer, Ervin Burke and Carlton Samuel, for the opportunity furnished by them for 32 of the St. Louis boys to return to their homes on a Labor day visit.

Mr. Burke and Mr. Samuel drove Mr. Burke's V-8 truck on this trip. The truckload left Camp Alton at 6 p. m. Friday, August 30, and arrived at St. Louis Saturday at 11:30 a. m.

During their short stay in St. Louis Mr. Burke and Mr. Samuel visited the most interesting points in the city, including the art museum, Forest park, the municipal auditorium, the Jefferson memorial and the civil courts building.

While the two drivers from Hope were in St. Louis they were indebted to the Kohler brothers, Charles and Robert, for their lodging. Although it was a short stay we hope it was enjoyed.

The Boys Return
Monday, September 2, at 12 a. m. the 32 boys again loaded into the truck and started on the road back to "good ole Arkansas." After another 17 1/2 hours' ride the 32 boys were back, and believe it or not they were still singing and hollering when they arrived at Alton.

Again we wish to offer thanks to all who had part in our going. Although our way of offering thanks is humble we assure you all that it is sent with the deepest feeling.

Today (Wednesday, September 4) we boys are leaving Hope for Garrison, Minn. And we are really going to miss the folks of Hope. The feeling in our hearts, people of Hope, we can't express merely by the use of words. But as long as we live the hospitality shown us here in Hope will be one of our dearest memories.

We bid each and every person in Hope a simple thanks, and goodbye. COMMITTEE, Charles V. Schmitt, Joe Graceffa, Jimmy Welch.

The Train Leaves
Editor The Star: Arrangements for the St. Louis holiday trip were made by Joe Graceffa through a news-story request for a truck, printed free by The Star. Owing to their impending departure for Minnesota the boys later believed they wouldn't be able to visit home over the holiday, but at the last moment it was successfully arranged.

Company 3738 loaded onto a special train on the Missouri Pacific Wednesday night and headed for the new camp in Minnesota.

Campaign Issue on Processing Taxes

If Declared Illegal Farmers Would Demand Amendment, Wallace

WASHINGTON, — (AP) — Secretary Wallace said Wednesday he had been told that 85 per cent of the farmers would favor changing the constitution if the AAA program is upset—by the Supreme Court.

"How accurate this report is, I cannot say," he added.

Just back from a trip through the West—he departed again Wednesday for Athens, Ga., to attend a meeting of Agriculture Department extension workers—Wallace said:

"There is a general and rising sentiment among the farmers against the protective tariff."

"Concerning their attitude toward court attacks on the Adjustment Administration, I was told that if we are 'Schechtered,' about 10 per cent of the farmers would favor enactment of the old Meary-Haugen farm program, about 5 per cent wouldn't know what they would want, and the remainder would want to change the constitution."

The secretary smiled as he said he understood some Republicans were drafting a far program as a substitute for the AAA.

Wallace declared he believed agriculture will be one of the opposition's principal problems in the 1936 campaign.

He said the AAA was based upon the need to balance crop production cycles, and that popularity of an administration also runs in cycles.

In the third year of any administration, Wallace said, "there is a mounting crescendo of criticism which reaches its apex in the spring of the fourth year. This is the essence of political campaigns."

"In the case of this administration, once the Republican platform and nominee are known, the significance of this criticism will be clearly apparent."

Wallace insisted that Midwest farmers are "feeling very good," adding with a smile that he also had found business men in Des Moines "almost solidly" behind the administration.

Sterilization Bill Vetoed in Alabama

Governor Graves Denounces Is as Dangerous for Women Patients

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (AP) — Governor Bibb Graves Wednesday returned the Dominick sterilization bill to the house with a veto message declaring it would result in death to many women "who have committed no offense against God or man save that, in the opinion of experts they should never have been born."

At the request of Representative Dominick of Tuscaloosa, the veto was concurred in by the house.

The bill provided for sterilization of feeble-minded, insane, degenerates and habitual criminals. It was sponsored by Dr. J. N. Baker, state health officer, and the Alabama Medical association.

In his message, the governor said, in part:

"We know that the enforcement of the provisions of this bill as to girls and young women will entail major operations upon many thousands. We know that an operation within the abdomen is one of the most serious of all major operations and that of necessity there will be a great number of deaths."

"We are now, in our feeble minded institutions and other institutions, confining these unfortunate women where they are kept safe and harmless, both as to themselves and as to society."

The new figures drew special interest here because of recent exchanges of notes between the United States and the Soviet government over activities of Communists.

County Ginning Is a Month Behind

North End to Equal 1934, But Prospects Aren't So Good in South

According to the county ginners the cotton crop in Hempstead this year is about 20 to 30 days behind last year's crop, with the result that last year's ginnings to date were several times the number of bales that have been ginned in the county so far.

In some sections of the county, particularly in the northern part, ginners estimate that approximately as much cotton will be produced this year as in 1934, but in the south end and especially along the river, the crop is said to be so short that it will not reach the unusually short production of last year.

NEW ORLEANS. — (AP) — Firmness carried over into the early trading in the cotton market on Thursday with active options two to four points higher at the first call.

Better cables and the growing belief that early crop estimates might be revised downward brought light buying into the market, and all months shared in the advance.

October rallied to 10.34 at the opening. December was up four points at 10.38, while May gained three points at 10.52.

NEW YORK. — (AP) — Cotton futures opened steady, one to five higher on "trade buying of near months and owing to small offers. October 10.40, December 10.46, January 10.46, March 10.52, May 10.56, July 10.60.

Mussolini's Aide Quits as Ethiopian Rises for Speech

Baron Pompeo Aloisi Leaves Council Chamber in Pointed Manner

TO ORDER INQUIRY

League Expected to Appoint Probers for Italo-Ethiopian Case

GENEVA, Switzerland — (AP) — Professor Gaston Jeze, Ethiopian representative, spoke in behalf of the African empire Thursday night (European time) in the council of the League of Nations—and when he rose to begin his address Baron Pompeo Aloisi, Italian delegate, left the chamber.

Thursday night's session was called suddenly after the delegates had spent the day in private discussions of the Italo-Ethiopian situation.

Labor Takes a Hand

GENEVA, Switzerland — (AP) — Organized labor prepared Thursday to take up the Italo-Ethiopian problems as the League of Nations council, faced with the uncompromising stands of the two nations involved, retired the matter momentarily to the status of private discussions.

It was understood that the council may meet Friday and appoint a general committee of inquiry.

It is to consider all aspects of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute and prepare a settlement plan.

Italy "Outlaws" Ethiopia
GENEVA, Switzerland — (AP) — A few hours after the League of Nations took up the Italo-Ethiopian situation Wednesday an Italian spokesman said that his government had outlawed Ethiopia and "will engage in no discussions with her representatives in Geneva."

Baron Pompeo Aloisi said: "We have not asked for the expulsion of Ethiopia but the League has the facts and must decide whether it wants Ethiopia or us."

There is "grave danger" of war, he admitted, but "there is no immediate danger of hostilities unless there is provocation."

When the council session opened, Aloisi denounced Ethiopia as a "barbarous nation, incapable of controlling itself, and said such a country 'cannot continue to be a member of the League.'"

"Italy has no desire or intention of leaving the League," Aloisi said later, "but today we announced we would preserve complete liberty of action. This means liberty with reference to the League—liberty to do what we consider right and proper with reference to military action against Ethiopia."

Aloisi said Italy would not be violating the Briand-Kellogg pact by action against Abyssinia because Italy had adhered to reservations which were made by Great Britain when she signed the treaty.

Premier Pierre Laval of France, who is attempting to bring Britain and Italy together upon a compromise, expressed gratification that the word "sanctions" was not spoken Wednesday and said his impression of the first day was not favorable.

Members of the council heard an Ethiopian spokesman, Prof. Gaston Jeze, reply with denunciation of "Italy's persistent military preparations" which, he said, constituted a grave menace to peace. Jeze urged quick intervention by the League. He said "Italy can no longer utilize the pretext of the Udal incident, so she has brought forth new charges."

Dye's Effect On Skin Shown By Patch Test

The skin occasionally becomes exceedingly sensitive to certain dyestuffs. The result is an eruption or irritation which appears every time the skin comes in contact with anything containing the dye. Other skins are sensitive to soap, water, heat, friction, and similar irritants.

It is possible to find out whether the skin is sensitive to such a substance by what is called the patch test. However, this test cannot be made without some understanding of medical technique and methods.

In the patch test a little of the substance which is supposed to be bringing about the eruption is applied to the skin for 24 hours. Thereafter the skin will be found exceedingly irritated at the spot where the application was made.

The substance most commonly causing irritation in dyed hair, furs, and similar substances is a dye preparation called paraphenylenediamine or one of its oxidation products. In a thousand routine tests made by one investigator, 4 per cent of the people tested were shown to be sensitive to this substance.

Whereas fur and hair are most frequently dyed with paraphenylenediamine, other dyes may be used for fabrics. When there is a sensitivity to a dyed fabric, the doctor gets an indication of the fact by the limitation of the eruption.

For instance, in case the dye is associated with a dress or a frock, the eruption will be found limited to the upper trunk and the arms, where the frock is in contact with the skin.

The portions of the skin not in contact, such as those protected by shoulder straps, will be found free from the eruption.

When the irritation is due to a dye in the stockings, the husband, the gloves, or some similar article of apparel, it will be found limited to the regions covered by these articles.

Of course the first step in getting rid of such an eruption is to discontinue the wearing of the garment responsible.

The specialist in diseases of the skin will also supply a lotion or ointment to prevent itching and to aid healing.

A BOOK A DAY

Making a Murderer of An Ordinary Man.

"We the Accused," by Ernest Raymond, is a study of murder—not, I hasten to add, a mystery or a thriller, but a war-battered, sympathetic examination of the things that can make an ordinary well-meaning mortal take a human life.

It tells about a grubby little English school teacher, getting on in his fifties, a pathetic little failure who is yoked with a quite unendurable wife. This little chap, whose days are drab and dull and hopeless, falls in love with an almost equally grubby and pathetic girl, and is loved by her in return. For the first time in their two lives, the lovers get a taste of happiness.

There remains, of course, the problem of the school teacher's wife; and Mr. Raymond skillfully shows how the inoffensive, mild-mannered little man is at last driven to put arsenic in her soup. Then, of course, comes discovery, and the lovers take to their heels. Their flight is desperate, but hopeless. Scotland Yard runs them down at last, and the little school teacher is tried, convicted, and hanged—after having provided the British press with a "sensational murder case."

What makes this story effective is the author's knack of putting the reader in the murderer's shoes. His emotions become the reader's emotions; you hope for him and suffer with him, and you are filled with so much pity and understanding that it never occurs to you to moralize about his crime.

All in all, "We the Accused" is a remarkably powerful novel. Published by Stakes, it sells for $2.50.

Every 40 minutes a murder is committed in the United States.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Give Fingers and Arms A Hand

Sun-tanned hands, arms and elbows that looked so pretty when you danced in a frothy frock of pastel chiffon, or sat on the beach in a white bathing suit, are entirely out of place with full suits and sleek formal gowns. Now is the time to discipline cuticle, eliminate discolorations and get your skin back to its normal, smooth, pearly-white condition.

Elbows and fingernails require the most concentrated treatments, so begin right away to work on them and don't cut down on reconditioning routines until they are as white and dainty as pictures of arms and hands in soap advertisements.

Use Lemon for Bleaching Three times a week, rub elbows with half a fresh lemon and, before you throw it away, dig fingertips into the pulp and juice. This will remove brownish spots and discourage heavy tan. Something to soften the skin and improve its texture is your next consideration.

Your favorite tissue cream will do wonders for arms and shoulders. Put it on at night after you have bathed, and remove the excess before you go to bed. If you feel that nightly use of nourishing cream is a bit extravagant, turn to plain olive oil, the old reliable friend of every beauty-minded woman. Warm a bit of it, pour into two shallow bowls and rest your elbows in them while you are massaging your scalp or creaming your face.

Afterward, smooth a thin coat of warm oil on shoulders, arms and hands. If your nails are brittle and the cuticle is ragged and ugly, better massage them especially carefully with the oil and wear clean cotton gloves while you sleep.

Give Nails Occasional Rest Incidentally, hands and fingernails

Benardi to Referee Bout on Thursday

Ken Hollis vs. Lefty Williams Is Headliner on Local Mat Card

Tony Benardi, Little Rock wrestling promoter, will referee both bouts at Fair park arena Thursday night in which Ken Hollis will meet Lefty Williams in the feature event.

Benardi officiated here once before and proved popular with Hope fans. Benardi is a former heavyweight boxer, a former professional wrestler, and is plenty capable of taking care of himself, should any rough stuff occur.

The preliminary brings a new comer to Hope, "Count" von Brumberg, rugged German grappler. The "Count" is scheduled to mix it with "Cyclone" Herb Sampson.

The program starts at 8 p. m.

Don't forget about hand lotions. Get a greaseless one and put it on arms and elbows as well as hands and wrists. One of the better known hand lotions now comes packed complete with a patented top that is to be served into the neck of the bottle after the cap has been removed. With this, only two or three drops come out at once and the amount you usually spill when you pour lotion into the palm of your hand is saved.

Cardinals Win to Keep 2-Game Lead

Jess Haines Fails to Get 200th Victory, But St. Louis Wins

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—(P)—Old Jess Haines failed in his seventh try for his 200th major league victory but his Cardinal teammates rallied behind a relief hurler to pound out a 6-to-3 victory over the Boston Braves.

The victory kept them two games in front of the second place New York Giants, who meanwhile defeated Cincinnati.

Haines, who has been trying since July 21 to boost his 16-year victory string above the 199 mark, was replaced in the eighth by Bill Walker.

Wally Berger's thirtieth home run of the season shook Walker momentarily and gave the Braves a 3-to-2 lead, but the Cardinals mixed some fast base running with four singles and a couple of doubles to score four runs in their half.

Manager Frankie Frisch opened with a single of Ed Brandt, veteran southpaw. After Medwick flied out, "Ripper" Collins scored Frisch with a double. "Spud" Davis followed with another two-bagger off Ben Cantwell, who succeeded Brandt. That scored Collins. Davis then scored on Leo Durocher's single. Ernie Ostratt, batting for Walker, hit a single that advanced Durocher to third. He scored when Burgess Whitehead forced Ostratt at second.

Dizzy Dean went to the hill for the Cardinals in the ninth and retired three Braves in quick order. Joe Mower broke a 1-up tie in the fifth with a home run to the roof of the pavilion, but the Cards tied the count with a run in the seventh.

"Noise? Rabbits don't make a noise."

The BLUE DOOR

BEGIN HERE TODAY

RUTH WOODSON, a pretty, high-spirited girl of 19, an orphan, lives with relatives, the LAWRENCEs. Feeling herself hated by her cousin, LETTY LAWRENCE, Ruth impulsively takes a bus for the mid-west in hope of finding work. Running out of money, she is put off the bus in a small town just as a storm is breaking. She seeks refuge in a big, gloomy stone house with a blue door, and faints from hunger.

She is carried upstairs by the old housekeeper and a young man, JOHN McNEILL. The old housekeeper has mistaken Ruth for ELAINE CHALMERS, whose grandfather built the house. Ruth allows the mistake to stand, in order to enjoy the good meal and comfortable bed which she needs. The old woman says to her, "Please call me Penny, like you used to do."

Elaine Chalmers, meanwhile, at school at Graystone College, vows in a sorority meeting to win the love of her first sweetheart, John McNeill.

Ruth resolves, with regret, to quit the old house early next morning.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VIII

RUTH did not realize her own exhausted condition. When she sank into a deep, dreamless sleep it was not to be wakened at day-break, as she had planned, but in response to a knock on her door hours later.

Sitting up in consternation, she cried, "Come in!" and there entered the old woman with the bent back and peering eyes.

"Oh!" cried Ruth. "I meant—" She stopped abruptly, for, of course she could not say, "I meant to run away before you caught me!"

"I was worried about you, Miss Elaine. Are you feeling better? And will you take your breakfast now?"

Ruth thought, "Now I'm in it up to my neck! Yet a lifting happiness mingled with her dismay. She would have to spend another day here and another night! In this situation there were blended three elements that cheered her: adventure, a little respite from her wanderings, and (most important of all) the chance of seeing once more the young man named John.

"Oh, Lawdy me!" exclaimed the old woman. "Are you too sick to talk, Miss Elaine?" She came to the bed and put her hand on the girl's forehead. "Where do you hurt most?"

Ruth laughed. "I don't hurt at all, Penny, and I'm not sick. Just tired and stiff and sort of jumbled in the head. I was so surprised to find myself here that I couldn't answer you."

Penny said, "When your letter came Tuesday, sayin' you were comin' to the old house for a rest I didn't think you'd be followin' it so soon. I thought you said you'd be here in a couple of weeks. My eyes are terrible bad. I reckon I read it wrong."

"Don't you ever wear glasses, Penny?" asked Ruth scoldingly. "They don't help, Miss Elaine.

John McNeill just missed being handsome... had the rare quality of distinction.

I think it's cataract. I'll end up by bein' stone blind, I'm afraid."

"Oh," said Ruth, "I'm sorry!" She impulsively took the old woman's hand and held it for a moment against her cheek. Here was another human being with troubles as deep as her own, and without the hope of youth to help her bear them. "Poor Penny!" she murmured.

"Not that I can't see to take care of the house!" the old woman declared hastily.

"Oh, no!" agreed Ruth. "Did you say breakfast, Penny?"

"Yes, Miss Elaine. There're plenty of fresh eggs. I still keep chickens—white leghorns, the same as when you were a child."

"I'd like a couple of your white leghorns, Penny," Ruth said with enthusiasm, "and a cup of coffee. Some toast, too, if it's not too much trouble."

"It's not," Penny said. "You've changed a lot, Miss Elaine. You never used to think whether a thing was trouble or not." She went out, shaking her head in wonder.

AFTER breakfast the girl amazed the old servant yet further by making her own bed and tidying her room. "I don't want to cause you any extra work," Ruth explained. "You've enough to do as it is."

"I can manage the work fine," the old woman declared positively. "I hope you'll tell your mother and stepfather that, if you get a chance, I don't want to be pensioned off, not till I drop in my tracks."

Ruth saw that the old creature had a horror of giving up her place. She longed to reassure her, yet she felt that such deception would be cruel in the end. As she thought of the old woman's troubles, her own schemes took second place. The impulse came to tell Penny, then and there, that she was not entertaining "Elaine," but just a tramp girl who had wandered in for shelter.

"Penny," she said, "I've something to tell you. I'm not—"

There came a knocking at the front door and Penny said, "Tell me later, Miss Elaine. It's young John McNeill come to ask about you. He carried you upstairs when you fainted last night. He was worried."

She went hobbling down the stairs to open the door, while the knocking continued, with some impatience.

Presently Penny called, "Will you come down, Miss Elaine?" Ruth made a quick survey of herself in the mirror, added a discreet touch of lipstick and went down. Her heart was pounding with both panic and pleasure.

The young man was waiting at the foot of the stairs. John McNeill just missed being handsome, but Ruth's eyes, in their hasty survey, saw that he had the rare quality of distinction. He looked up at her quizzically and Ruth thought, "He'll know I'm a fake. I shan't have to confess."

But he said, "Good morning, Elaine," and held out his hand. She was surprised to find herself saying, "John McNeill!" and putting her hand in his.

THERE was a little silence between them after they had shaken hands, but it was not an awkward silence. Penny, who was observing them like a benighted owl, remarked enviously, "Do you find her much changed, Mr. John? I can't depend on my eyes any more."

"Changed for the better," John McNeill answered coolly.

Penny remarked, "She hasn't made as big a woman as I thought she'd make. She was always an over-fat child, and well filled out too."

John put his head on one side, considering this. "Let's see—how old were you when you visited here last?"

"Twelve," Ruth replied glibly. "To herself she observed, 'Bright girl! I know the answers—so far.'"

"And I was 16," John McNeill said thoughtfully.

"I was in love with you," Ruth remarked audaciously. "You were too old to notice me much, but I was crazy about you just the same." (She thought, "Whatever made me say that!")

Penny said with a cackle, "Yes, you were, Miss Elaine! You used to follow him around everywhere, makin' eyes at him. Such airs as you put on, to get him to notice you!"

John McNeill laughed and joined Penny in looking back through the years. "But I noticed she was a good-looking kid," he confessed. "I remember I said to my mother,

"Give Elaine Chalmers four or five years and she'll be a professional heart-breaker. She's got something—"

"It seems to me her hair looks darker," Penny stated. "Her mother's hair turned dark that way, too, though not so noticeable."

Ruth thought, "Why have I gotten into this thing! In just a minute something's going to be said—something's going to break—"

But nothing was said, and nothing broke. John McNeill turned the conversation from the past to the present, as if that alone interested him. "I'm on my way to work now," he remarked, "but all days must be remembered. I can't invite myself to dinner tonight, Penny. If I brought a steak and cooked it myself—"

Penny said, "Why, yes, Mr. John. But shouldn't you bring your mother, too?"

"Mother's out of town," he answered, "visiting Aunt Sarah in Saratoga." (Ruth realized she had been holding her breath.) "So you see it's pure charity for you to take me in."

AS he left he said to Ruth, "No more fainting! Promise?" She laughed. "I was just like a gay nineties heroine last night, wasn't I? I can't imagine what made me do it!"

He looked at her curiously. "You seemed pretty tired," was all he said.

After he had gone Penny seemed to want to talk, but Ruth set about evading her. John McNeill's visit had caused Ruth to abandon all thought of the confession she had been on the verge of making. She thought, "It would spoil everything. I'm going to be Elaine for a few hours longer. It's the nicest thing that ever happened to me!"

So when Penny said, after a while, "Excuse me, Miss Elaine, but does your stepfather, Mr. Deal, say anything more about selling the house?" Ruth replied cannily. "I think it's best for us not to discuss things like that, Penny."

She felt contrite when she saw how rebuffed the old creature looked, so she exclaimed hastily, "That funny nickname 'Penny'! How did you get that? I've forgotten."

"Why," the old woman answered, diverted, "it happened when you were just a little tot. I gave you pennies for your bank because you had a fancy for dropping them in. Every time you dropped in a penny a little iron man stepped out and saluted. So you called me 'Penny'!"

Ruth laughed absently, but she was looking at her hands. "I meant to ask you, Penny—have you any turpentine? I've got blue paint on my hands. It must have come off the door last night. I didn't realize it was freshly painted when I was pounding on it—"

"Oh!" cried the old woman reproachfully. "You've scared the door!"

She looked so stricken that Ruth said quickly, "If I have, I'll repair the damage. Have you any paint left?"

"Oh, yes," Penny said queerly. "But the quarter moon's past. I'll have to wait now—"

That was the first intimation Ruth had that the old woman was "touched," that mystery as well as pathos dwelt under that roof. . . . Penny hobbled quickly to the porch and Ruth could see her, through the prismatic glass of the side panels, rubbing the door with her sleeve and squinting at it anxiously. (To Be Continued)

Washington May Drop Watchman

Dismissal of Lee McDonald Because of Low
Funds Is Rumored

WASHINGTON, Ark.—Due to lack of funds it may be necessary to do away with the services of Lee Mc-Donald, night-watchman and town marshal, it is said this week by members of the town council.
Revenues derived from the city 5-mill tax, which is the town's only source of revenue at the present time, amount to slightly more than is necessary to pay for street lights and incidental expenses. The night-watchman has been paid partly by the town and partly by the merchants of Washington, and partly by the county for watching the court house, in the past.
Some time ago, however, the county judge refused to allow the county's part of the watchman's salary. Several merchants are said to be paying a part of his salary at the present time, while others are not contributing. Most of the burden was left on the town treasury several months ago, and with a little surplus money on hand, the town paid no long as it could, said the mayor. It can no longer meet this obligation, though, she says.
It has, therefore, been decided that unless the merchants can agree to some method of keeping Mr. McDonald on his job, it is likely that Washington will be without his services by the end of September, or possibly before.

Kentucky Official
Is Assassinated County Attorney Blown to Bits as Result of Election Fight

HARLAN, Ky.—(AP)—Harlan County Attorney Elmer C. Middleton was killed Wednesday by a dynamite blast as he started his automobile. The explosion, apparently set off by Middleton stepped on the starter in front of his home here, practically destroyed the car and hurled the county attorney dying to the sidewalk.
Embroidered in the bitter Democratic primary fight August 3 in which he acted with Adj. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt and National Guard troops, Middleton was criticized by the Harlan county grand jury and various officials as a result.
Middleton, a cousin of Sheriff Theodore R. Middleton, one of the legal fight against Denhardt and the troops, had told friends he "would not be surprised to be slain at any time as a result of my activities."
Middleton's car had been parked in front of his home Tuesday night and Wednesday morning. A moment after he got into it, the machine was a mass of metal from which Middleton's body racketed to the street. Seventeen unexploded sticks of dynamite and four undischarged shotgun shells were found in the wreckage. There was no way of telling how many sticks of dynamite and how many shells had exploded.
Adjutant General Denhardt, who was indicted in RWY-ETAOINET, was indicted in Harlan as a result of bringing troops here in defiance of a Circuit Court order, refused to appear here, saying he feared he would be assassinated. He finally posted $10,000 bond in Frankfort.

The primary was marked by bitterness between adherents of Thomas S.
Rhea and Lieut. Gov. A. B. (Happy)
Chandler, opponents in the run-off primary Saturday for the Democratic nomination for governor.
Middleton, a Republican, was elected in 1933. He is survived by his widow and nine-month-old daughter.

J. Earl Johnston, pool manager, said the new policy was consistent with the new loan and adjustment payment plan designed to create free market conditions.
He added, however, he would exerof contracts to be transferred and where it appeared advisable would ac-market purchases or by taking deliv-market against declines.

Johnston said he would do every-to improve the basis price being paid to producers at the spot markets.

He reiterated that the pool would conduct its operations in a manner to avoid undue market disturbances and that, consistent with the interest of the pool members, would manage its futures contracts in such a way as to aid in restoring the normal relationship between the contract positions for

Urge Air Marker for Washington

WPA Headquarters Advises County Seat to Put Up Roof-Sign

Washington is one of the 280 towns and cities in the state which have been selected by the Airport Division of the WPA, as potential sites for air markers. It is stated in a letter received by Mrs. Pink Horton, postmaster, this week from the WPA headquarters in Little Rock.

The letter goes on to say that the WPA will furnish the labor for these markers, but that the towns are asked to provide the paint. From eight to 10 gallons of paint will be required, it is said.

It is desired to put the name "Washington" on some large roof, with an arrow pointing toward the north.

headquarters that he believed the death toll would be less than 200. This estimate, he said, was made after contact with all hitherto unheard from points in the area.
No estimate of the crop and property damage could yet be obtained and it was likely a factual total of the loss of life would not be available for days. The Red Cross figure was the first of a semi-official nature to be announced. Rescue forces were being organized in all parts of the affected area, however.
